How wealth is made
Productive, unproductive, destructive (video)	As an entrepreneur, you can engage in entrepreneurship in productive, unproductive or destructive manners. Please outline what these terms mean to you, personally.	What does it mean for entrepreneurship to be productive, unproductive or destructive? When is it one or the other?
Working hard and creating value (video)	You will likely work hard and create value for society, in various forms. How, and in what amounts, would you find it fair to be rewarded for that?	What do you think of value creation and hard work as justifications for extreme wealth? Do you think there are limits to the value that a single person obtains? If so, what would that limit be, and why?
Descendants, divorcees and inheritance (video)	You may have a romantic partner and children at some point. How, and in what amounts, would you find it fair that they will be transferred any wealth that you may have earned?	To what extent is it fair that some people become a billionaire without having earned those billions themselves?
Entrepreneurial motivation and tax (video)	Would lower taxes encourage you to engage in entrepreneurship, and higher taxes discourage you? What other motives determine your motivation to engage in entrepreneurship?	How do you think taxation affects entrepreneurial motivation? Are there other ways to motivate entrepreneurs than by lowering taxes?
How wealth is used
Opportunity-enhancing consumption (video)	As an entrepreneur, you may become wealthier than many others in your community or society. Once richer than others, you may also engage in priviliged consumption, for example, ensuring exclusive access to the best hospital services, or placing your children in private schools. Would this restrict others in their access to resources and opportunities? And, if it does, is this a problem?	Does the consumption behavior of billionaires restrict the broader population in their access to resources and opportunities? And, if it does, is this a problem?

Large influence (video)	As an entrepreneur, you may become wealthier than many others in your community or society. Once richer than others, you may exert more influence over various aspects of society than less affluent members do. What do you feel and think about this?	How do you feel about a few billionaire entrepreneurs exerting large influence over various aspects of society?
Limited accountability (video)	As an entrepreneur, you may become wealthier than many others in your community or society. Once richer than others, do you feel you should somehow be accountable for how you use your wealth?	Do you feel that billionaire entrepreneurs should be accountable for how they use their wealth?
Minimizing tax payments (video)	As an entrepreneur, you may become wealthier than many others in your community or society. Once richer than others, do you feel you carry a special responsibility to contribute to the expenses of your government? Or are you entitled to minimize tax payments through any legal means, just like any other person?	Are billionaire entrepreneurs entitled to minimize tax payments through any legal means, or do they carry a special responsibility to contribute to the expenses of their government?
Climate change (video)	As an entrepreneur, you may become wealthier than many others in your community or society. Once richer than others, do you feel you should be compelled to contribute to climate finance? If so, how?	Do you believe that billionaire entrepreneurs should be compelled to contribute to climate finance? If so, how?
How wealth is experienced by others regardless of how it is made or used
Social comparison (video)	Looking beyond how you will earn and use your wealth, do you believe that, once wealthier than others, these others will experience your status as a wealthy individual as positive or negative?	Looking beyond how entrepreneur billionaires earn and use their wealth, do you experience their very existence as positive or negative?
Societal conflict and violence (video)	What causes and occurrences may lead to eruptions of social unrest aimed at the extremely wealthy?	Do you believe that extreme wealth inequality could lead to societal conflict and violence? If so, when could this happen?
